

The POPPY SEED CAKES

MAUD-MISKA
PETERSHAM,

MARGERY CLARK

T.P.S.C.
UP TO 10
GR. 1-4
$3.25

The POPPY SEED CAKES

By
MARGERY CLARK

Auntie Katushka in her bright shawl, Andrewshek and Erminka, not to speak of poppy seed cakes, goat, goose, swan, chickens, dog, cat, red-topped boots and the rest bring the right combination for nursery tales—little children and nursery adventures, presented with imagination and novelty.

The Petershams have used gay color and humor to bring out the amusing situations in the stories. An ideal nursery book.

---

ADOWS and SYMBOLS to the TRUTH
ad Cor loquitur
GROVE COLLEGE
X LIBRIS

E C545p

MAUD-MISKA
PETERSHAM

AUNTIE KATUSHKA BROUGHT A HUGE BAG FILLED WITH PRESENTS

The Poppy Seed Cakes

By Margery Clark pseud. of

Mary E. Clark

Illustrated by Maud & Miska Petersham

Garden City, New York
Doubleday & Company, Inc.

COPYRIGHT, 1924, BY
DOUBLEDAY & COMPANY, INC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

PRINTED IN THE UNITED STATES

THE POPPY SEED CAKES

ONCE upon a time there was a little boy and his name was Andrewshek. His mother and his father brought him from the old country when he was a tiny baby.

Andrewshek had an Auntie Katushka and she came from the old country, too, on Andrewshek's fourth birthday.

Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka came on a large boat. She brought with her a huge bag filled with presents for Andrewshek and his father and his mother. In the huge bag were a fine feather bed and a bright shawl and five pounds of poppy seeds.

The fine feather bed was made from the feathers of her old green goose at home. It was to keep Andrewshek warm when he took a nap.

The bright shawl was for Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka to wear when she went to market.

AUNTIE KATUSHKA STARTING HOME FROM THE MARKET

The five pounds of poppy seeds were to sprinkle on little cakes which Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka made every Saturday for Andrewshek.

One lovely Saturday morning Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka took some butter and some sugar and some flour and some milk and seven eggs and she rolled out some nice little cakes. Then she sprinkled each cake with some of the poppy seeds which she had brought from the old country.

While the nice little cakes were baking, she spread out the fine feather bed on top of the big bed, for Andrewshek to take his nap. Andrewshek did not like to take a nap.

MAUD-MISKA
PETERSHAM

SHE SPRINKLED EACH CAKE WITH POPPY SEEDS

Andrewshek loved to bounce up and down and up and down on his fine feather bed.

Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka took the nice little cakes out of the oven and put them on the table to cool; then she put on her bright shawl to go to market. "Andrewshek," she said, "please watch these cakes while you rest on your fine feather bed. Be sure that the kitten and the dog do not go near them.”

“Yes, indeed! I will watch the nice little cakes,” said Andrewshek. “And I will be sure that the kitten and the dog do not touch them.” But all Andrewshek really did was to bounce up and down and up and down on the fine feather bed.

“Andrewshek!” said Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka, “how can you watch the poppy seed cakes when all you do is to bounce up and down and up and down on the fine feather bed?” Then Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka, in her bright shawl, hurried off to market.

But Andrewshek kept bouncing up and down and up and down on the fine feather bed and paid no attention to the little cakes sprinkled with poppy seeds.

Just as Andrewshek was bouncing up in the air for the ninth time, he heard a queer noise that sounded like “Hs-s-s-s-sss,” at the front door of his house.

“Oh, what a queer noise!” cried Andrewshek. He jumped down off the fine feather bed and opened the front door. There stood a great green goose as big as Andrewshek himself. The goose was very cross and was scolding as fast as he could. He was wagging his head and was opening and closing his long red beak.

BOUNCING UP IN THE AIR FOR THE NINTH TIME

“What do you want?” said Andrewshek. “What are you scolding about?”

“I want all the goose feathers from your fine feather bed,” quacked the big green goose. “They are mine.”

“They are not yours,” said Andrewshek. “My Auntie Katushka brought them with her from the old country in a huge bag.”

“They are mine,” quacked the big green goose. He waddled over to the fine feather bed and tugged at it with his long red beak.

“Stop, Green Goose!” said Andrewshek, “and I will give you one of Auntie Katushka’s poppy seed cakes.”

“A poppy seed cake!” the green goose quacked in delight. “I love nice little poppy seed cakes! Give me one and you shall have your feather bed.”

But one poppy seed cake could not satisfy the greedy green goose.

THE GREEN GOOSE TUGGED AT THE FINE FEATHER BED

“Give me another!” Andrewshek gave the green goose another poppy seed cake.

“Give me another!” the big green goose hissed and frightened Andrewshek nearly out of his wits.

Andrewshek gave him another and another and another till all the poppy seed cakes were gone.

Just as the last poppy seed cake disappeared down the long neck of the green goose, Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka appeared at the door, in her bright shawl. "Boo! hoo!" cried Andrewshek. "See! that naughty green goose has eaten all the poppy seed cakes."

"What? All my nice little poppy seed cakes?” cried Andrewshe’s Auntie Katushka. “The naughty goose!”

The greedy goose tugged at the fine feather bed again with his long red beak and started to drag it to the door. Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka ran after the green goose and just then there was a dreadful explosion. The greedy goose who had stuffed himself with poppy seed cakes had burst and his feathers flew all over the room.

“Well! well!” said Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka, as she gathered up the pieces of the big green goose. “We soon shall have two fine feather pillows for your fine feather bed.”

THE WHITE GOAT

ONE fine Saturday morning Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka said, "Andrewshek, I must go to market and buy a goat."

Andrewshek was playing in the garden. He had pulled out some of the feathers from his fine feather bed and had put them in his hair. He looked very funny.

As Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka went out of the gate to go to market, Andrewshek said, "May I go with you, Auntie Katushka?"

“No, Andrewshek!” said his Auntie Katushka. “You must stay at home. Please watch to see that the dog does not open the gate and let the chickens and the cat run out into the road.”

“Yes, indeed, I will watch to see that the dog does not open the gate. And I will be sure that the chickens and the cat do not run out into the road.”

Then Auntie Katushka, in her bright shawl, hurried off to market. But all Andrewshek really did was to swing backward and forward and backward and forward on the dark green gate.

Andrewshek loved to swing backward and forward on the gate just as much as he loved to bounce up and down on his fine feather bed.

ALL ANDREWSHEK DID WAS TO SWING BACKWARD AND FORWARD AND BACKWARD AND FORWARD

At the market Auntie Katushka saw a white goat. The white goat had a long beard and a short tail. “That is just the goat I want!” said Auntie Katushka.

“White Goat!” said Auntie Katushka. “I am going to take you home with me to Andrewshek.”

“Who is Andrewshek?” said the goat.

“Andrewshek is a little boy who lives across the tracks and up the hill, in a little house with a dark green gate. Andrewshek loves to swing backward and forward and backward and forward on the dark green gate.”

“I would not be surprised if Andrewshek was swinging backward and forward on the green gate now,” said the goat to herself. “I think I’ll run ahead and see.”

She galloped off.

“Stop, White Goat!” cried Auntie Katushka. “Stop!”

But the goat did not stop. She ran faster and faster, across the tracks and up the hill until she came to the little house with the dark green gate. Andrewshek was swinging backward and forward and backward and forward on the dark green gate. The chickens and the cat had long before run out into the road.

“How do you do, Andrewshek?”
said the white goat.

“How do you do, White Goat?”
said Andrewshek. “Where are you going?”

“HOW DO YOU DO, ANDREWSHEK?”

“No further!” said the white goat.
“I belong to your Auntie Katushka.”

“Where is my Auntie Katushka?”
said Andrewshek.

“I ran away from her, across the tracks and up the hill; and here I am!”
said the goat.

“Won’t Auntie Katushka be surprised when she sees you here!” said Andrewshek.

“I think I will hide!” said the white goat. She ran behind the little house.

Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka, in her bright shawl, came hurrying up the hill.

“Andrewshek, I bought a sweet white goat at the market, to give us milk for our poppy seed cakes. She ran away and so we cannot have any poppy seed cakes to-day. I wonder how we can find her!”

“Ha! ha! ha!” the sweet white goat called out. She had climbed to the top of the roof where she could look down on Andrewshek and Auntie Katushka.

“Come down from the roof, you naughty White Goat!” said Auntie Katushka.

The goat shook her head.

“Please come down!” said Andrewshek. “And I will give you a big poppy seed cake.”

“I do not like poppy seed cakes,” said the naughty white goat.

“What shall we do?” said Andrewshek.

Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka

"I DO NOT LIKE POPPY SEED CAKES," SAID THE NAUGHTY WHITE GOAT

went into the house and took off her bright shawl. She put on her apron.

She washed some turnips and some parsnips, two onions and four carrots for the soup. Then she cut the green tops from the vegetables. She put the green tops in a basket. “Goats love fresh green tops,” she said to Andrewshek, as she put the basket on the back porch by the door. She left the door wide open.

The naughty white goat was peeping over the roof to see what she could see. She saw the green tops in the basket by the kitchen door. Immediately she felt very hungry. She clambered down from the roof. She stole up to the basket.

“Well! well!” laughed Andrewshek’s

A yellow decorative border frames the text. The top part features three stylized deer or goat heads facing right. The bottom part features a basket filled with stylized leaves.

Auntie Katushka, as she slipped a halter around the white goat's neck. "We soon shall have plenty of milk for our poppy seed cakes."

THE PICNIC BASKET

NE cool summer morning Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka said, "Andrewshek, I think I will put some sandwiches and some cottage cheese and some poppy seed cakes and two eggs in our picnic basket. Then we will go to the park and eat our lunch there, near the water.”

“May I go with you, Auntie Katushka?” said Andrewshek.

“Of course you may go to the park with me,” said Auntie Katushka. “But first we have a great many things to do, before we can start to the park. I must go into the garden and catch the white goat. I will tie her up so she will not run away. Please find the kitten, Andrewshek, and put her in the cellar, so she will not worry the chickens while we are gone.”

“Yes, indeed, I will find the kitten and put her in the cellar,” said Andrewshek, “so she will not worry the chickens while we are gone.”

But all Andrewshek really did was to lift up the red and white napkin which Auntie Katushka had laid over the picnic basket and look at the eggs and the poppy seed cakes and touch the sandwiches and taste the cottage cheese.

The goat was not easy to catch. The goat wanted to go to the park, too. She galloped round and round the garden.

THE GOAT WAS NOT EASY TO CATCH

At last Auntie Katushka caught her and tied her firmly to a post.

Then Auntie Katushka went into the house to get Andrewshek and the lunch basket. She saw Andrewshek peeping under the red and white napkin and tasting the cottage cheese. He had forgotten all about the kitten.

The kitten was nowhere to be found. “I think she must be paying a visit to the Mouse family,” said Auntie Katushka.

Then Auntie Katushka put on her bright shawl and took her umbrella with the long crooked handle under one arm. Then she picked up the lunch basket with the red and white napkin on top and she and Andrewshek started for the park.

They went down the hill and across the tracks and past the market and down a long street until they came to the park by the water.

Andrewshek sat down on the grass beside a little stream. Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka laid her umbrella with the long crooked handle and the basket of lunch on the grass beside Andrewshek.

ANDREWSHEK SAT DOWN ON THE GRASS

“Andrewshek,” said Auntie Katushka, “I must go to the spring and get some water for us to drink. Please watch the basket with the eggs and the sandwiches and poppy seed cakes and cottage cheese while I am gone.”

“Yes, indeed, I will watch the basket of lunch,” said Andrewshek.

But what Andrewshek really did was to say to himself, “I would like to take off my shoes and my stockings and wade in the little stream. I believe I will!”

Andrewshek took off his shoes and his stockings and went wading in the little stream.

A big white swan came floating calmly down the stream. He saw the picnic basket lying on the grass. He stopped and stretched and stretched his long neck, till he could touch the basket. “Honk! honk! honk!” said he. “I wonder what is under the red and white napkin.”

The big white swan lifted the napkin with his red bill and looked in the basket.

“Oh, oh, oh! Won’t Mother Swan be pleased with this nice lunch!” said he.
“Sandwich bread makes fine food for baby swans.”

He picked up the basket in his strong red bill and floated it ahead of him down the stream.

Andrewshek could not wade after the big white swan. The water was too deep.

ANDREWSHEK COULD NOT WADE AFTER THE BIG WHITE SWAN

“Stop! stop! White Swan!” cried Andrewshek. “That is my Auntie Katushka’s picnic basket and it has our lunch in it. Please put it back on the grass.”

“No, indeed! I will not put the basket back,” honked the big white swan. “Sandwich bread makes fine food for baby swans and I have ten baby swans to feed.”

The big white swan gave the picnic basket a little push with his red bill. The basket floated on down the little stream. The big white swan floated calmly behind it.

Just then Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka came hurrying up with the spring water. She saw the big white swan floating down the stream, with the lunch basket floating ahead of him.

Andrewshek stood in the middle of the stream, crying.

Auntie Katushka picked up her umbrella with the long crooked handle. Auntie Katushka ran along the shore until she overtook the big white swan, with the lunch basket floating ahead of him.

She caught the handle of the picnic basket in the crook of her long handled umbrella. She drew the basket safely to shore.

“Well! well!” said Auntie Katushka, as she spread the red and white napkin on the grass, and laid the sandwiches and the poppy seed cakes and the cottage cheese and the eggs upon it. “It always pays to carry an umbrella to a picnic.”

ERMINKA AND THE RED TOPPED BOOTS

 ONCE upon a time there was a little girl and her name was Erminka. When Erminka was exactly four and one half years old, her Uncle Anton came to her house from the old country. Erminka's brother was one year and two days younger than Erminka and much smaller.

Erminka's Uncle Anton brought a set of wooden dolls for Erminka from the old country. Erminka liked the wooden dolls, although she did not like most dolls very much. The dolls' blue dresses were painted on; the dolls' pink arms were painted on; the dolls' red shoes were painted on.

Uncle Anton brought Erminka's brother a pair of red topped boots. Uncle Anton had bought the red topped boots from a shoemaker in the old country. "I will take a large pair of red topped boots," he said to the shoemaker.

ERMINKA LIKED THE WOODEN DOLLS

“It is better to have the boots too large than too small. If they do not fit now, they will in a year. Little boys grow very fast.”

The red topped boots were too big.

“You will have to wait at least a year before you are large enough to wear them,” Erminka’s mother said.

“Oh, then the red topped boots will be just right for me!” cried Erminka, “for I am just a year and two days older!

May I wear them?”

The red topped boots were too big for Erminka.

“I can wear three pairs of thick stockings with the red topped boots, Mother,” she said, “and then they will fit me.”

In the morning Erminka did not bother to find three pairs of thick winter stockings. She put on her thin white socks and slipped the boots on over them quickly.

After breakfast Erminka's mother went into the garden at the back of their house to pick butter beans and tomatoes. Erminka went along to carry the basket.

She wore the red topped boots.

“I must show my red topped boots to those tomato plants at the end of the garden,” Erminka said to her mother. “The red tomatoes and the red tops on my boots are just the same color.”

She ran down the path in a great hurry.

“See!” she called to the tomato

"MY RED-TOPPED BOOTS AND YOUR RED TOMATOES ARE THE SAME COLOR"

plants. “My red topped boots and your red tomatoes are the same color! Aren’t they beautiful?”

Just then Erminka and her red topped boots slipped. Erminka found herself flat upon her back and flat upon her favorite cucumber vine.

“Oh dear! oh dear! you have crushed a cucumber, Erminka!” cried the tomato

ERMINKA HAD DONE MORE THAN CRUSH ONE CUCUMBER

plants. “Oh dear! oh dear!”

But Erminka had done more than crush one cucumber. She had sat upon ten cucumbers and two juicy red tomatoes and one little bean vine and two fat summer squashes.

In the evening after supper Erminka’s mother said to Erminka’s father, “What do you think Erminka did to-day in the garden?”

“I do not know,” said Erminka’s father as he puffed on his long pipe. “Had it something to do with the red topped boots?”

“Yes!” said Erminka and her mother at the same time. “How did you guess so quickly?”

ERMINKA AND THE CRATE OF CHICKENS

ERMINKA, I need eighteen duck eggs. I think I shall go to market for them,” said Erminka’s mother.

“May I go with you? May I carry the little basket? And may I carry some eggs? And oh, Mother!” said Erminka, “may I wear the red topped boots?”

“Will you be very careful, Erminka, and not upset anything to-day, if you wear the red topped boots?”

“I will be careful, Mother, if I may wear my red topped boots,” said Erminka. “I look so beautiful in my nice red topped boots.”

“Your brother’s red topped boots,” reminded Erminka’s mother.

“Well, Erminka,” said Erminka’s mother, as she locked the kitchen door. “I am ready to go to market now. I think I will buy some gooseberries, too. Then we can have gooseberry tarts.”

“May I make some tarts, too, and have a tea-party?” Erminka asked.

“Yes, indeed!” said her mother.

Erminka and her mother started for the market. They went down a hill and across the tracks and up two blocks until they came to a big red shed.

ERMINKA AND HER MOTHER STARTED FOR THE MARKET

It was the market. Inside, the farmers and the farmers' wives were selling vegetables and fruit and chickens and flowers and one farmer had five little white pigs for sale.

Erminka's mother saw many friends among the farmers' wives.

"How do you do, Mrs. Smith?" she would say. "Have you any sweet butter this morning?”

“How do you do, Mrs. Gray? Have you any nice fresh buttermilk?”

“Good morning, Mrs. Popolovski! Have you any nice little cabbages to-day?”

Erminka grew tired of visiting with all these friends. She wandered off by herself.

She saw a crate full of chickens. “You nice chickens!” she said. “Wouldn’t you like to see my red topped boots?”

“Yes, indeed!” said the chickens.

Erminka opened the door of the crate with the toe of her red topped boot.

As soon as the crate was open, five white chickens flew past Erminka. The market was upset. Everyone stopped buying apples and selling eggs and ran after the chickens.

FIVE WHITE CHICKENS FLEW PAST ERMINKA

The chickens flew wildly about the market in all directions. One chicken fluttered out of the front door of the market and down the street. Only a baby chicken was left in the crate.

The market master and the farmers caught the chickens and put them back in the crate.

A decorative border at the top of the page featuring a repeating pattern of white chickens on a yellow background.

“I did not mean to let the chickens run away, Mother,” said Erminka. “But it looked so easy to open the door of the crate with the toe of my red topped boot.”

“Your brother’s red topped boot,” reminded Erminka’s mother.

In the evening after supper Erminka’s

A decorative border at the bottom of the page featuring a central floral motif and geometric patterns on a yellow background.

mother said to Erminka's father, "what do you think Erminka did to-day at the market?"

"I do not know," said Erminka's father, as he puffed on his long pipe. "Had it something to do with the red topped boots?"

"Yes!" said Erminka and her mother at the same time. "How did you guess so quickly?"

"HAD IT SOMETHING TO DO WITH THE RED-TOPPED BOOTS?"

ERMINKA AND THE DUCK POND

I THINK we shall have to go to the shoestore and buy Erminka a pair of pretty black slippers,” said Erminka’s mother. "Perhaps then she will not go poking her toes into places where they do not belong."

"That is a fine idea," said Erminka's father.

The next afternoon Erminka and her mother set off for the shoestore to look for a pair of pretty black slippers. On the way they stopped to pay a visit.

The house of Erminka's mother's friend was in a garden full of fruit trees and sweet smelling flowers.

“Let us go and sit in the garden,” said Erminka's mother's friend.

They went into the garden and sat down on a white bench under an apple tree. Soon they began to talk very fast about friends in the old country.

Erminka grew tired of visiting. She ran down to the end of the garden to see the ducks.

Four brown ducks with yellow bills and one large white duck were swimming in a little duck pond at the end of the garden. The ducks swam lazily around and around, until they saw Erminka and her red topped boots.

FOUR BROWN DUCKS WITH YELLOW BILLS AND ONE LARGE WHITE DUCK WERE SWIMMING

“Would you like to see my red topped boots?” called Erminka.

The ducks came up to the shore. They pecked at Erminka’s boots with their long bills. One big duck came up on the shore beside Erminka.

Erminka was afraid of ducks when they came so close and pecked. Erminka took three steps backward, away from the duck pond.

The edge of the duck pond was very muddy. Erminka slipped. She sat down with a bump in the soft mud. The little ducks paddled away to the other end of the little pond when they heard the splash. The muddy water splattered on the white feathers of the big duck. He waddled back to the pond. He was very angry.

THE MUDDY WATER SPLATTERED ON THE WHITE FEATHERS OF THE BIG DUCK

Erminka's red topped boots were drenched with mud.

In the evening after supper Erminka's mother said to Erminka's father, "What do you think Erminka did today?"

"I think I can guess," said Erminka's father, as he puffed on his long pipe. “I guess that Erminka bought a pair of pretty black slippers.”

“No, indeed!” said Erminka and her mother at the same time.

Erminka went to the cupboard and brought out the sad-looking red topped boots.

“I fell in the duck pond,” she said.

“Never mind, Erminka!” said Erminka’s father. “Next week I am going back to the old country for one month. I will go to the shoemaker and buy another pair of red topped boots that will be just your size.”

THE SHOEMAKER IN THE OLD COUNTRY

THROUGH THE FENCE

ERMINKA and her mother and her little brother went to live at Erminka's uncle's house, while Erminka's father was in the old country. Ermin-ka's uncle lived across the tracks and up a hill, in a yellow house with a dark red roof and a little garden. The house was next door to the little green house where Andrewshek lived. There was a high fence between the two gardens.

ON THE WAY TO THE UNCLE'S HOUSE

Erminka's uncle was a carpenter. He had made Erminka three little chairs and a little table and painted them a nice bright blue.

One warm summer afternoon Erminka took her three little blue chairs and her little blue table out into the garden.

“Now we will play tea-party,” she said to her little brother.

Erminka’s little brother was such a tiny boy that he did not play tea-party in the way Erminka wanted.

ERMINKA'S LITTLE BROTHER

Erminka saw Andrewshek next door, playing in his garden.

“Please come over and play tea-party with my little brother and me!” Erminka called to Andrewshek.

“How can I get over into your yard? My Auntie Katushka has tied the gate tight shut. I used to swing on the gate so much that the kitten and the chickens would run out into the road.”

“Here is a nice little hole in the fence,” said Erminka. “Perhaps we can make the hole bigger, so you can crawl through.”

Erminka and her little brother and Andrewshek all tugged at a board and shook it and pulled it as hard as they could.

After a long time Andrewshek was able to crawl through the hole. Andrewshek sat down in the third little blue chair.

“Will you have a cup of tea, Andrewshek?” asked Erminka.

“Yes, thank you; I will have a cup of tea,” said Andrewshek.

"YES, THANK YOU; I WILL HAVE A CUP OF TEA," SAID ANDREWSHEK

“Yes, thank you; I will have a cup of tea, too,” said a voice behind Erminka.

It was the white goat. She had poked her way through the hole in the fence.

“Yes, thank you; I will have a cup of tea and some cakes, too,” said a voice behind Andrewshek.

It was the dog. He had crawled

IT WAS THE WHITE GOAT

through the hole in the fence.

“Yes, thank you; we will have two cups of tea and some cakes, too,” said two voices behind Erminka’s little brother.

Two of Auntie Katushka’s chickens had fluttered through the fence.

“Dear! dear! what shall we do?” said Erminka to Andrewshek. “We have no more cups and no chairs for them to sit upon.”

“We could sit on the table,” said the white goat politely.

“But then there would be no room for the dishes and the cakes!” said Erminka.

“I think I will be going home then,” said the white goat.

“I think I will be going home then,”
said the dog.

“We think we will be going home then,” said the chickens.

“I think I will be going home, too,”
said Andrewshek.

The white goat poked her way through the hole in the fence. The dog crawled through the opening and the two chickens fluttered through after him.

Then Andrewshek crept through the fence.

Auntie Katushka was on the other side.

“What shall I do with a runaway goat, Andrewshek?” asked Auntie Katushka.

AUNTIE KATUSHKA WAS ON THE OTHER SIDE

“I would put him to bed,” said Andrewshek.

“What shall I do with a runaway dog, Andrewshek?” asked Auntie Katushka.

“Put him straight to bed,” said Andrewshek.

“What shall I do with two runaway chickens, Andrewshek?” asked Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka.

“Put them straight to bed,” said Andrewshek.

“And what shall I do with a runaway little boy?” asked Auntie Katushka.

“I don't know,” said Andrewshek.

“I do,” said Auntie Katushka.

Then Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka picked Andrewshek up in her arms and carried him in to his fine feather bed.

TO HIS FINE FEATHER BED

THE TEA PARTY

THE next morning Andrewshek's Auntie Katushka said to Andrewshek, "I think I will make some poppy seed cakes."

Then she took some butter and some sugar and some flour and some milk and nine eggs and rolled out some nice little cakes.

“Why are you making so many nice little poppy seed cakes?” asked Andrewshek.

“Because we are going to have a tea-party this afternoon,” said Auntie Katushka. She sprinkled each little cake with some of the poppy seeds she had brought from the old country.

“Who is coming to the tea-party?” asked Andrewshek, as he watched his Auntie Katushka put the poppy seed cakes in the oven.

“Erminka and Erminka’s mother and Erminka’s little brother,” said

Auntie Katushka.

“Oh, goody!” said Andrewshek.
“And I hope Erminka brings her wooden dolls.”

Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka took off her kitchen apron and hung it on a nail beside the door. She took the nice little cakes out of the oven and put them on the table to cool. Then she went to the cupboard drawer and took out her very best silk apron and the bright shawl which she had brought from the old country. She laid the apron and the shawl on the fine feather bed.

SHE TOOK THE NICE LITTLE CAKES OUT OF THE OVEN

“When it is time for the tea-party, I will put these on,” said Auntie Katushka to Andrewshek. “Now I am going next door to invite Erminka and Erminka's mother and Erminka's little brother to the tea-party. Please watch the kitchen door while I am gone. Be sure that the kitten and the dog and the chickens do not come into the house."

"Yes, indeed! I will watch the kitchen door while you are gone next door," said Andrewshek. "And I will be sure that the kitten and the dog and the chickens do not come into the house.”

Four stylized white figures, possibly representing women in traditional dress, are arranged horizontally across a yellow border at the top of the page. Each figure has a rounded head, a large collar, and a decorative pattern on its lower body.

But all Andrewshek really did was to put on Auntie Katushka’s very best silk apron and her bright shawl and walk back and forth and back and forth in front of the mirror. He paid no attention to the kitchen door.

A decorative border at the bottom of the page features a repeating geometric pattern of interlocking lines in yellow and white.

BACK AND FORTH IN FRONT OF THE MIRROR

Just as Andrewshek was walking back and forth and back and forth in front of the mirror for the eleventh time, he heard a great commotion at the kitchen door. The kitten and the dog and the two chickens and the white goat had come into the kitchen.

They went straight to the kitchen table.

“Don’t I see poppy seed cakes?” the white goat asked Andrewshek.

“They smell delicious!” said the kitten and the dog and the two chickens.

“Auntie Katushka made the poppy seed cakes for a tea-party,” said Andrewshek.

“Are we invited to the tea-party?” asked the white goat.

“Are we invited to the tea-party?” asked the kitten and the dog and the two chickens.

“I think not,” said Andrewshek. “Here comes Auntie Katushka, I will ask her.”

The kitten and the dog and the two chickens and the white goat ran out of the door and into the garden as fast as they could go. Andrewshek took off the best silk apron and the bright shawl and laid them on the fine feather bed.

“Erminka and Erminka’s mother and Erminka’s little brother will come to our tea-party at exactly half past three,” said Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka.

At exactly half past three Erminka and Erminka's mother and Erminka's little brother came to the tea-party.

Erminka brought her wooden dolls. Erminka wore her new black slippers.

Erminka and Andrewshek and Erminka's little brother played together with Erminka's dolls around the corner of the house, near the front gate. Erminka said, "My mother says we may have a tea-party for you and your Auntie Katushka at my house to-morrow and have gooseberry tarts.”

“Goody!” said Andrewshek.

Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka spread a clean white table cloth on the table under the apple tree in the garden. She brought out two plates of poppy seed cakes and five cups and saucers and five spoons and five napkins. Then she went back into the house to get some strawberry jam.

SHE SPREAD A CLEAN WHITE CLOTH ON THE TABLE

The white goat and the kitten and the dog and the two chickens came and sat down on the bench beside the table under the apple tree in the garden. They sat very quiet with their hands folded.

THEY SAT VERY QUIET WITH THEIR HANDS FOLDED

“If we behave nicely,” said the white goat, “perhaps Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka will let us join the tea-party.”

Andrewshek’s Auntie Katushka came out on the porch with a bowl of strawberry jam in her hand. She saw the white goat and the kitten and the dog and the two chickens sitting quiet on the bench, with their hands folded.

“Well! well!” said Auntie Katushka.
“Some more friends have come to our tea-party. I hope they will like poppy seed cakes and strawberry jam, too.”

And they did.

927 00073683 2

Mr. Apple's Family

BY JEAN McDEVITT

ILLUSTRATED BY NINON

There never was a family quite like the Apple family.

First it was Mr. Apple's idea that, as long as his name was Apple, his children should have Apple names, so there was Mac-Intosh, Jonathan, Delicious, Snow and, finally, just Ann Apple.

Then it was Mrs. Apple's idea that their city apartment was too crowded for seven Apples. That was how they happened to move to a new home in an apple orchard. It took lots of work, indeed, inside and out, for all the Apples to make it look like a real Apple home.

But it was the red and shiny apples in the orchard that solved the Apple family problem and made it possible for them to do the thing they wanted most.

This is a perfect book for beginning readers to read themselves — a delightful story with gay pictures on every page.

E
C545p

The
POPPY SEED CAKES

By
MARGERY CLARK

Illustrated by Maud & Miska Petersham

- “Most highly recommended” (★★) in the H. W. Wilson Children's Catalog as a book “whose demonstrated usefulness in elementary school libraries is vouched for by a group of experienced librarians and specialists in children's literature.”
- Recommended by the Child Study Association.
- Recommended by the American Council on Education in its publication “Reading Ladders for Human Relations.”